An image which the European Union has chosen as one of its' symbols is the "Woman Riding The Beast". In 1984, the European Parliament issued a centenary stamp which contains that image.

The image of the "Woman Riding The Beast" also appears on a huge painting in the European Parliament building, and is a huge sculpture outside the European Union Council of Ministers Office, both located in Brussels, Belgium.

Note the statement shown on the poster "Many Tongues One Voice", inverts God's judgement on Babel. Note also that the normal European stars have been inverted to a pentagram, which shows the horns, ears and beard of Lucifer. See parallels with Genesis 11:5-9.

In December of 2000, the European Union opened its' Parliament building in Strasberg, France modeled after the Dutch artist Pieter Bruegel's famous 16th century painting, "The Tower of Babel".
